

CONFESSED SLAYER OF 5-YR.-OLD GIRL IS SAFE IN PRISON

Adolph Hotelling Put Under Guard in Strong Cell at Reformatory

SPIRITED FROM MOB

Married and Father of Five Children; Two Daughters Are Married

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 17 (I.N.S.).—Adolph Hotelling, confessed kidnaper and fiend-slayer of 5-year-old Dorothy Schneider, is hidden away in a strong cell at the State Reformatory at Ionia, Mich., according to reports reaching here today.

The 47-year-old murderer, who was arrested late yesterday at his home at Owosso, was rushed to Lansing after a mob of 10,000 enraged citizens stormed the jail here and demanded his life.

The move from Lansing to the Ionia Reformatory was made when authorities learned another mob was forming at the capital.

Hotelling is married and the father of five children, two of them married daughters. He was an elder of the Church of Christ at Owosso.

Hotelling's crime was one of the unspeakable atrocities that normal human beings can only shudder at but never understand. In its details are many striking parallels of the notorious Hickman case in Los Angeles.

Hotelling confessed while en route with his captors from Owosso, his home, to the Flint jail he said he had driven his car to Flint to look for work and was cruising through Mount Morris, a suburb, when he saw the little Schneider girl.

"I don't know why I did it," he said. "I took her in the machine and drove around awhile. Then I carried her into a thicket, cut up her body and hid it down in the creek."

Hotelling then told of coming back to his car and finding it stuck in the mud. A farmer, he said, helped him out, after which he returned to his home at Owosso.

This farmer, Archie Bacon, who unwittingly aided the slayer, was the first to report the incident to police after the girl's body was found near his home, he has identified Hotelling as the man he helped out of the mud.

A large blood-stained knife, which Hotelling is said to have admitted using to kill the girl, was found on his person, according to arresting officers.

The little girl was kidnapped and slain last Thursday. Since that time the greatest manhunt in the history of Michigan had been underway. The tip that finally led to the guilty man's arrest came from Sheldon Robinson, a Mount Morris carpenter. Hotelling is also a carpenter.

Robinson told police he had been working with a man at Flushing, who, he believed, was the man they wanted. He said he talked continually about the crime and boasted that when the rewards were great enough, he would "tell them just where to find the murderer."

Deputy sheriffs from Flint speeded to Flushing, but found Hotelling had left the job there. They hastened on to Owosso and found the middle-aged mad sitting comfortably at home with his wife and five children.

"It looked like a poor tip," one of the deputies said later, "but Hotelling's demeanor was anything but reassuring, so we looked around. We found the decrepit sedan described by Farmer Bacon and then we felt we were on the right track."

Mrs. Hotelling, the slayer's wife, broke down and sobbed that she was sure her husband "couldn't have done this thing."

The arrest of the churchman was a shock to his fellow citizens, who, despite the broadcasting of descriptions of the slayer's car, never suspected their pious elder.

Hotelling had been a deacon. Recently—three days after the crime—he was elevated to the rank of elder. The morning of the day he was made elder, he presided at communion services.

When news of his arrest and incarceration in the Flint jail went the rounds, citizens from Flint and nearby towns began to gather. The crowd grew around the jail to the number of ten thousand. They demanded that the prisoner be delivered to them.

Their rushes on the jail were repelled by tear gas bombs. Meanwhile a call for State troops went out and Hotelling was spirited to Lansing. Finally jail officials persuaded the leaders to appoint a committee to inspect the jail and assure themselves that the slayer was not there.

This was done, but even then the crowd was reluctant to disperse. Michigan has a State law against capital punishment. For this reason the mob, made up mostly of factory workers, were determined to lynch the murderer.

Under the Michigan law, Hotelling must be brought back to Genesee County, where the crime occurred, for arraignment. He will be kept at Ionia, it was said, until feeling subsides and it will be safe to return him.

POLICE ON MANHUNT FOR CAPITAL FIREBUG

Damage Estimated to Approximate More Than $500,000, And May Be Higher

16 FIREMEN IN HOSPITAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (I.N.S.).—Police pressed a vigorous manhunt today for the pyromaniac who started the worst series of fires in Washington's history.

The city was kept in an uproar during the night and early morning hours by seven major fires and ten lesser ones, and false alarms.

Damage was estimated at more than $500,000 and the figure may go higher.

Sixteen firemen were taken to hospitals suffering from exposure and smoke but there was no loss of life.

Police arrested John J. Fisher, 29, an ex-policeman, this morning, while the last fire was still burning. Fisher was trailed to his home after he was seen fleeing from the scene of the Phillips blaze. Police said he admitted being at all the fires but had denied starting the blazes. He could not satisfactorily explain mud and tar on his clothing, police said.

Police declared Fisher recently received treatment at Walter Reed Hospital as a psychopathic patient.

All fire apparatus was on the run since shortly after 11 o'clock last night. Ten companies and a deputy chief from Baltimore and all available fire fighting units within 30 miles were summoned to help battle the fires.

All Washington fire and police reserves were called out.

Not since the Knickerbocker Theatre disaster, when about 100 lives were snuffed out under a snow laden roof, has Washington experienced such a hectic night.

The unending shrieking of sirens and the clanging of bells aroused the city and thousands of people left their beds to follow the fires.

Hardly had apparatus been called to the first fire before another general alarm came in, then another. Fire Chief Watson realized he couldn't stop the blazes with his present force. A hurry call was sent to Baltimore.

Ten companies drove the 40 miles to Washington in an hour. As additional alarms poured into headquarters, appeal for help went to nearby Maryland and Virginia suburbs. They responded promptly.

Police and fire chiefs agreed that the fires were of incendiary origin.

At three o'clock police sent out a dragnet to bring in all suspicious persons. One boy was caught but after severe questioning by police was turned loose.

The maniac deliberately picked out highly inflammable buildings to touch off the wires. Most of the blazes were in the downtown section, but as police guards were thrown around this area smaller fires broke out in the outlying districts.

SCOUTS' GOOD TURNS ARE MOST GRATIFYING

Croydon Troop Acts Are Recorded; Gave Fine Assistance

BRISTOL LADS ACTIVE

By A Good Scout

It has been very gratifying to everyone associated with Scouting in Bucks county to learn of the many troop Christmas good turns. Another example of how fully the boys of our Scout troops are endeavoring to live up to their oath and laws was displayed by boys of the Croydon troop. After surveying the needs of the community, the Scouts gathered enough food-stuffs, even including chickens and celery, to fill thirteen baskets. Considering the time and effort involved in the filling of one basket, the Croydon Scouts have completed a splendid helpful project.

Among the features of the series of sessions for future Sea Scout leaders at the Central Y. M. C. A. at Philadelphia, were inland waterway navigation, chart instructions, repairing canvas, grommeting, ship activities, and a brief history of the sea. A number of the men of our county are taking this course, and the last two programs are going to be of further interest. Special speakers give a ten minute lecture on older boy problems at each session. Two sessions remain on the last two Wednesdays of January, 18th and 25th. You will enjoy it, come.

At both the Delaware Valley District and Doylestown District meetings plans were completed for the conducting of the courts of honor during our eighteenth anniversary week celebration, February 6th-12th. In the former district, merit badge examiners were selected for each of the four community groups of Middletown, Morrisville, Newtown and Yardley.

Troop No. 5, of Bristol, Scoutmaster Harrison Leake, has a group of "live wire" Scouts who are putting across a number of interesting Scout activities, among the most recent being a patrol, an individual project contest which has given the troop some very good exhibit material. Mr. Leake has nearly a full troop of scouts with a high percentage of attendance.

The county council executive board will meet at the Doylestown Inn, Doylestown, February 16th.

GAME THIS AFTERNOON

Bristol High School boys' five will not play any game tonight. This afternoon the Cardinal and Gray sextet will play Berwyn High. Game starts at 4 p. m.

SUPERVISORS ASK FOR TAX INCREASE AT RICHLANDTOWN

Boost From Ten To Fifteen Mills Is Requested By Them

AUTO CASE ON TRIAL

Company Claims Damages Done To Bus By A Private Machine

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 17.—Before the opening of the second week of civil court yesterday a petition was filed in the court of Quarter Sessions, for the supervisors of Richland township, asking for an increase of the road tax of that township to fifteen mills. The present rate of road tax is ten mills.

The petition sets forth that the increase is necessary to properly maintain the roads. There are 49 miles of hard surface roads and three miles of earth roads in the township. The township indebtedness amounts to $7,502.42. The assessed valuation of all property amounts to $96,630. The net amount of road tax levied in 1927 was $9,220.

In Court No. 1 upon motion by Thomas Ross, of Doylestown, attorney for the defendants, the case of Samuel Mariz, Morris L. Mariz and Benjamin Mariz, trading as the L. K. Thread Company, against Samuel Greenberg and Granville J. Hollenbach, of Riegelsville, was continued for the term at the cost of the defendant. The continuance was due to the absence of a principal witness for the defense.

With Judge William C. Ryan, presiding in Court No. 1, the case of the Water Bus Company, Inc., of Easton and Newark, N. J., against Sol Glassman, and another case in which the plaintiff is the same party as in the former case, against Morris Polin, of Philadelphia, got under way.

The bus company, operators of a passenger route between Philadelphia, N. J., and Philadelphia, are seeking to recover from the defendants for damage alleged to have been done to a passenger bus on the Easton highway near Ottsville on the morning of September 8, 1926, when it is alleged Sol Glassman, driving his car, ran into the passenger bus.

Mark Waer, of Easton, president of the bus company, was called as the first witness. Charles E. Werkheiser, of Easton, a salesman and passenger on the bus the morning of the collision, testified that the Glassman car was coming north on the highway and the bus was going south. He said the passenger car was going at "top speed" and the first thing he knew, it had struck the bus.

SEARCH FOR MISSING GIRL SHIFTS TO CONNECTICUT AS ATTORNEY GIVES NEW CLUE

Young Woman, Believed To Be Miss Frances St. John Smith, Seen in Connecticut City by Attorney — Hundreds Follow Clues for Missing College Girl

BRISTOL, Conn., Jan. 17 (I.N.S.).—

The search for Miss Frances St. John Smith, missing Smith College freshman, shifted to this city today following the statement of George Ward, a local attorney, that he had seen a young woman here on Sunday afternoon who resembled the vanished eighteen-year-old girl.

Ward said that while driving along the Deerfield road between Hartford and Bristol, he offered a "lift" to a well-dressed girl who was walking toward Bristol. According to Ward, she replied:

"Are you looking for me?" Ward, somewhat surprised, answered in the negative. Later, after seeing Miss Smith's picture in a newspaper, he became positive that the girl was the student for whom hundreds of persons have been searching near Northampton, Mass.

Earlier in the afternoon two clerks and a woman in a Hartford drugstore noticed a girl resembling Miss Smith. Her clothing resembled that of the missing student in every detail, they said.

Detectives today began a thorough search of the Bristol district.

BRISTOL BOWLING LEAGUE ENDS SCHEDULE'S 1ST HALF

Rohm & Haas Wins Honors By Winning A Total of 44 Games

AMISSON IS SECOND

The Bristol Bowling League's first half season's schedule was completed Friday night when the Amisson Pottery and Y. M. A. teams concluded their match which turned out to be a fitting climax. The three games were won by the Amisson five, and gave them possession of runners-up.

In annexing this match they also took possession of the season standing record of high match score by rolling 2,781 pins. The previous figure was 2,758. The Amisson team suffered severely by being compelled to play its two previous matches with but four men. This lost them, perhaps, the first-half championship. They have since strengthened their team by acquiring "Sam" Delrick and L. Amisson. The Legion team prepared to give the other teams above them something to worry about by adding E. Henry to its list.

The Keystone team stayed intact, and expects to be reckoned with, as does the Harriman Men's Club.

The Exchange Club after winning one game from the Phila. Suburban team is as confident as the leaders about being able to win games. They do not claim to win the second half, but they do expect to give them all something to worry about.

Y. M. A. TAKES LEAD IN CAGE LEAGUE HERE

Jumps Into First Place By Defeating K. of C. Five

CELTICS ARE BLOCKED

By T. M. Juno
Y. M. A. basketball five gained undisputed possession of first place in the Bristol Basketball league here last night by defeating the K. of C. five, 29 to 15, while the Celtics bowed to Leedom's, 31 to 24.

The Y. M. A.-K. of C. conflict was very rough and slow. Fine guarding on the parts of Bauer and "Bill" Hardy, a graduate of Bristol High, prevented the Knights from rolling in many points. The "Caseys" showed a fine fighting spirit.

The best game of the evening was the Celtics-Leedom's game. The carpet-makers five jumped into the lead from the opening tap-off until the bell rang ending the game.

The Celtics, very anxious to keep in a tie for the league lead, were threatening every minute.

With three minutes to play and the Celtics but three points behind the Leedom's quintet, Timekeeper Gallagher suddenly noticed that the time-keeping watch had stopped. This caused a bit of confusion at first, but a new watch was acquired. From then on the battle was Leedom's.

David and Trott were high scorers for the Leedom's five, scoring 8 and 10 points, respectively. The David-Trott working machine is one of the best of the league. "Dead-Eye" Delanty put in one of the longest shots on the local floor. Standing on the visitors' foul mark, he shot the ball, which hit the rim of the basket and then bounced into the net for a wonderful two-point goal.

"Hun" Rodgers, one of the smallest players of the league, was high scorer for the Celtics' five, scoring eleven points. Lawler played a good defensive game for the losers. Both games were nicely refereed by "Jumping Jack" Fulkert, of Trenton.

LETTING WASHINGTON DO IT

The dangers that attend a too great centralization of governmental powers are known to all. The present tendency toward such centralization, owing to modern conditions of communication, is inevitable and not to be wholly withstood; but the people can prevent the burdening of the federal government with tasks too great for it to perform efficiently and which can be done better by the states themselves. State's rights should be preserved for the good of the federal government, as well as for the good of the states and the people.

There is another condition in the affairs of government worthy of serious consideration by every thoughtful citizen. It is frequently charged that the men of today who are willing to enlist in the public service are, on the average, inferior in education and capacity to those who thus dedicated their lives in the early days of the nation. This is especially true of legislative and executive branches of national and state governments.

One reason for this condition is found in the greater opportunities open today in commerce and industry. The public service offers a small chance of lasting fame, smaller chance of appreciation and scarcely a living wage for men of large calibre. This condition must be changed if the government is to compete with other lines of service for the right sort of men. And critics of governmental administration and legislation must be fair enough to recognize satisfactory service even from political adversaries.

BUSINESS ETHICS

It is a wholesome sign of the times that business and professional men are engaged so frequently in discussing the ethics of their particular occupations. Many trade associations, service clubs and other organizations have committees on business standards and have published codes of ethics. Lecture courses on the subject have been given at several universities, books are being written along these lines, and there are organizations which exist for no other purpose than to promote higher standards of business conduct.

However, many persons fail to be overly impressed by mere organization or printed codes, standards and platforms. It has been said that the synonym for farmers' co-operation is perspiration. In the same way high standards of business come only from everlasting education of the individual in his own personal morals, and not from writing down ten rules or appointing a committee. Drawing up codes has nearly reached the stage of the ridiculous when clergymen talk of the necessity of having a set of moral rules for members of their profession.

There has been a gradual improvement in ethics, standards and practices, but the craze for codes and platforms has been a result, rather than a cause, of that improvement. When business and professional men became individually more ethical they set about making others ethical. It did not occur to them that the ethics of the others had improved with theirs.

Not having any faults would be a very great fault.

Perhaps the funniest things on earth are middle names.

A married friend tells us he is assistant head of his home.

"BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN," starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Myra Martin, secretary to Leonard Gilbert, a prominent divorce lawyer, is engaged to her employer. One morning her younger sister, Helene, whom she has cared for since the death of their mother, comes to Myra's office and there meets Huntley Sheldon, a notorious man about town whose temperamental wife is attempting to divorce him for the fourth time. Myra warns her sister against Sheldon, but Helene, although interested in Ralph Naylor, is fascinated by the man. Too young to realize the danger of playing with fire, she arranges to meet Sheldon without Myra's knowledge.

CHAPTER III

Myra Martin leaned back in the easy chair in which she was trying to rest after a hard day in the office. The book she had been reading now lay idly in her lap. She closed her eyes for a few moments, and then restlessly resumed her novel. She turned a few pages idly, but somehow she could not keep her mind on the thread of the story. It slipped away from her and then she would re-read, knowing less than she had before. Finally she threw the book aside on the table, stretched, and yawned. After a while she got up and walked around the room, pushing a cushion to rights, settling a chair.

Her ears were strained to hear any sounds in the hallway of the small apartment house. Once she went to the open window and looked out on the street filled with softly vague shadows, broken here and there by twinkling lights. She looked at her watch. It said ten-thirty. Helene would probably be in soon, now. And Myra wanted to talk to her. Finally she went back and threw herself down on the chair and once more picked up her book. It was not long, however, before she was interrupted by the sound of footsteps in the hall, and then a key turned in the lock and Helene entered.

"Hello, Sis," Helene greeted Myra brightly, flinging off her coat, and throwing it carelessly on the lounge.

"Did you like the show?" Myra asked.

"Pretty well," Helene smiled, removing her hat and running her fingers through the fluffy red curls. "I'm tired." She dropped into a comfortable chair and leaned back, closing her eyes. "There was one awfully good woman in the cast—I don't remember her name. I liked her a lot—Ralph didn't. But then, he wouldn't."

"Who wouldn't he?" Myra smiled.

"O, I don't know," Helene yawned. "She had a lot of good lines. It was about a girl who married a very poor man, and she hated the struggle and the little quarrels of married life, so she decided that until her husband could really be more of a lover and less of a husband, she'd leave him. And Ralph didn't care for the idea."

"I see," Myra laughed. "And you did."

"Well, I think she was right, don't you?" Helene sat up again, interested.

"Yes, I suppose so," Myra agreed. "It seems to be that sort of thing that causes so many divorces."

"Good gracious, Myra," Helene curled herself up in her chair, "don't you ever get away from that office and divorce, and what not? I think you'll be sleeping there pretty soon."

"Well, it has its interesting side," Myra admitted. "I learn a lot about people."

"Hm, I'd rather learn about 'em some place else."

The two sisters sat silent for a while, Helene gazing into space, and Myra studying carefully the face of the girl who sat opposite her. She was trying to figure out some way to start a conversation

A FORECAST IN 1851

Horace Greeley, founder of the New York Tribune, was an outspoken enemy of the liquor traffic, and as early as 1854 he published an editorial in the Tribune advocating the passing of a prohibition law. He envisaged conditions if such a law were passed, and his words, in the light of conditions today, sound as if they might have been penned within this month.

He wrote: "That all liquor selling will be stopped in a city like this (New York) we do not anticipate; but we will make it a stealthy, hidden, guilty business, so prosecuted, that he who will drink must sneak down back stairs and through underground passages to find liquor; and wherever that shall be the case there will not be one glass drunk where ten glasses are now, nor one new drunkard manufactured where there are now a hundred. And in spite of executive complicity with vote-gathering, groceries this shall yet be!"—Christian Science Monitor. —(Adv.)

BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN BY ARLINE DE HAAS

"BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN," starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Myra Martin, secretary to Leonard Gilbert, a prominent divorce lawyer, is engaged to her employer. One morning her younger sister, Helene, whom she has cared for since the death of their mother, comes to Myra's office and there meets Huntley Sheldon, a notorious man about town whose temperamental wife is attempting to divorce him for the fourth time. Myra warns her sister against Sheldon, but Helene, although interested in Ralph Naylor, is fascinated by the man. Sheldon explains to Helene that his wife "doesn't understand him" and Myra again cautions her sister to beware of married men.

men with neurotic, nervous wives, who also go out, like Ulysses, on a quest. And their quest is the same as that of the man whose wife does not understand him. In this case there is sometimes good reason for the quest—you see, I'm being quite broad-minded about all this."

Helene nodded.

"The reason I say that is because many wives have, through lack of interest in life, taken up with nerves in order to have something to talk about. Most women today haven't enough to do, anyhow. Small apartments, electric working machines, small families—everything tending to take away from a woman's responsibilities. As a result there is so little for a woman to do in the modern home that she becomes restless, takes to bridge and the matinee, and—her precious nerves."

"Remember this. A man comes home from his office after a day's work, more or less tired. Whether he has done much or little, it is, for him, the same, repetitious grind. When he arrives home he finds nothing to interest him but stories of the neighbors, the ice-man, the grocer, the butcher—what not. Now, those things are a woman's business, just as much as office work, or whatever he does, is a man's business. A man may discuss his business affairs with his wife—or try to, and her response is that all she hears is 'something about that old office and she's sick of it.' But she will retail by the hour her petty affairs—which are her office affairs—and expect a man to be interested. And when he isn't she can work up a case of nerves and command his interest first through pity, and then through a sense of duty."

"You'd better go out and reform the world, Myra," Helene laughed. "Doesn't it give you a headache to analyze that way all the time?"

"If you had such cases in your office every day you'd begin to think about these problems, and take them seriously," Myra nodded. "Not that I want you to take them seriously—or even think about them. But I'm trying to explain certain things to you."

"Well—the third type?" Helene stilled a yawn.

"The third type is the man who has no invalid wife, and who frankly admits that his wife understands him—or, who figures out some new excuse for admiring the ladies. And those are very few and far between. Now that that's over, what I really wanted to say is that Huntley Sheldon is exactly like all the rest of them. I can't understand why he hasn't found a new excuse—that misunderstood husband stuff is so futile. But I dare say he hasn't found the necessity for a new excuse. Women admire him—become infatuated with him—he scarcely needs an excuse. But right now, with the situation as it is, he's a person to keep away from. I do want to impress that on your mind, dear. He's liable to cause trouble."

"O, well," Helene rose, yawning. "Thanks for the lecture. I guess I'll go to bed."

"Run along. I'm coming in a few minutes," Myra began to pick up her books and straighten up the table. "Just remember one thing, though."

Helene turned in the doorway. "What's that?"

"Beware of married men."

CHAPTER IV
On the following morning Helene was awakened with the harsh clanging of the telephone in her ears. She glanced at the clock on her dressing table. Ten o'clock. Myra had gone by this time. She jumped up, snatched a dressing gown, and hurried into the living room to still the insistence of the bell's harsh jangle.

"Hello . . . Yes . . . Yes, this is Helene . . . O, Huntley! How are you? . . . Just fine . . . This afternoon? Why—uh—." Helene hesitated. For a moment all the portentous warnings of Myra flashed through her mind. And then through it all she could hear the voice on the other end of the wire, pleading, with just that touch of tenderness, that slight color of wistful intimacy, and she was saying: "All right, where, then? . . . What? You have a surprise for me? O, what is it? . . . A secret? Goody-goody-goody!" She laughed. "Yes, I'll be there about four . . . Bye-bye."

Helene hung up the receiver, drew her dressing gown more closely around her, yawned, and then went out to the kitchenette to find herself something for breakfast. She unearthed some peaches in the ice box, and set the electric percolator to making coffee. She sat down on the kitchen stool, munching at her peach, and stared at the coffee pot. She wondered whether she had done quite the right thing by promising Sheldon to meet him that afternoon—especially after Myra's long lecture of the night before. Suppose somebody should see them together and tell Myra. She would have something to say then, all right.

MANY CHALLENGERS ARE CONFRONTING CHAMPIONS

By Davis J. Walsh
I. N. S. Sports Editor
NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Plausible contenders arose on every hand, which really is the hard way to do it, to confront Mickey Walker, Joe Dundee and Sammy Mandell, world's champions threatened today with suspension by the National Boxing Association unless they sign to defend their titles against acceptable challengers within a period of thirty days. The threat was issued in the form of an official pronouncement by Thomas E. Donohue, president of the Association, and it means that if the lads decline to play, they will be strictly out of work in some twenty-two states. Considering the character of their competition, they shouldn't be short of work anywhere. Mandell, for example, has more acceptable lightweight challengers than Van Camp has beans. Yet only once has he stepped out in a title bout since winning the championship from Rocky Kansas and then it was with a second rater, Phil McGraw. That was on July 12 last. Walker's only middleweight defense was with Tommy Milligan in England on June 30 and the latter was and is no more worthy of challenging than was McGraw. Dundee hasn't defended anything, except his notorious run-out at Los Angeles, since he took the welterweight title from Pete Latzo.

The Los Angeles affair would have coupled Dundee with a real challenger, Ace Hudkins, but the ace is only one of several, at that. In fact, he was beaten by Sergeant Sammy Baker and, if anybody should get Dundee, the soldier would seem to be the man. Tommy Freeman isn't a bad specimen, either, and recently, Lew Tendler has given evidence of a revival. There will be something of a show down on this situation here on Friday when Hudkins and Tendler meet in the Garden. However, they must get Dundee out of hock first before they can do business. The welterweight champion is barred in California and New York, which makes the N. B. A. proclamation all the more effective. If the Association hangs him out on the line to dry, he virtually will be of the books everywhere. It wouldn't be exactly a good break for Walker, either. He has been doing all of his fighting in Illinois, a member of the Association, and although he isn't barred here, Jack Hearns' vendetta with Rickard brings such a condition into practical operation. Anyhow, it won't be long before the N. Y. Commission declares itself on Walker, since it already has spoken for its candidate, George Courtney. The Harlem Negro, Jack McVey, is another good man and then there is Bevo Shade, who once beat Walker for the welterweight title, only it didn't take. Maxey Rosenbloom, K. O. Phil Kaplan and Joe Anderson are other middleweights who could go in there with Walker with reasonable chances of success. As for Mandell, he has only to look to Jimmy McLarnin to find the so-called logical challenger. McLarnin knocked out Louis Kid Kaplan and holds a decision over Billy Wallace, another front line contender. Just what else a challenger must do to attract a champion's wandering notice seems to be a bit vague. McClarin, Wallace or Sid Terris would more than get by as opponents of Mandell, but the latter has been holding out for critical money. Sooner or later he must come in out of the wet and the N. B. A. says it won't be the former.

Adequate Refrigeration Means Food Saving

No one but the housewife and the garbage man knows the tremendous amount of food thrown away each winter in the average home, because of spoilage, says Mr. Winter, local Frigidaire dealer, who is conducting a campaign for better refrigeration the whole year round.

"It is a safe estimate that $50 worth of food goes into the garbage can between the first frost and the first spring robin, simply because adequate refrigeration is not provided during the winter," says Mr. Winter. "How much more is used that should be thrown away, it is of course impossible to determine."

During 1927, Dodge Brothers, Inc., undertook the long and difficult task of completely revising its products. While a curtailment of activities necessarily took place, the work of readjustment was so organized that a shutdown of the Dodge factories was avoided. This work has now been completed. Dodge Brothers has successfully passed through this transition phase and stands in a strong position, with both manufacturing and distributing facilities in shape to handle a greater volume of business than ever before.

Instead of confining itself to a single type of passenger car in a single price classification, Dodge Brothers emerges from its period of preparation with an extensive line of models in three different price classes. Newest in the Dodge line will be the
